VMLS may also cancel your electronic debits for any reason, including insufficient funds or bankruptcy. VMLS will provide a copy of the cancellation of electronic debits under this authorization.
- If your automatic payment is returned for any reason, including insufficient funds, VMLS and your bank or credit union may assess a fee. VMLS may, but is not required to, attempt to withdraw the payment 2 times before considering the payment unpaid. If an automatic payment is returned on 2 or more scheduled dates, VMLS may cancel all future electronic debits by giving you notice.
- You must notify VMLS of any error in connection with your electronic debit, or any change in your checking or savings account, or a change in your bank or credit union. If you fail to notify VMLS, you will take all actions needed to correct any error caused by the notification failure. You agree to hold VMLS harmless from any liability or loss, including its reasonable attorney fees associated with any error.

- In accordance with the terms of your VMLS account, the amount due each month may change from time to time. You authorize VMLS to make changes to your payment amount to accommodate any escrow, insurance or optional products to protect its security interest. Unless you are in bankruptcy, VMLS will notify you on your monthly billing statement of the new amount due at least 10 calendar days prior to the due date. VMLS's notice on your monthly billing statement of the amount due will constitute sufficient notice of any change in the amount of the electronic debit.
- If your due date falls on a weekend or a holiday, the automatic payment will be debited from your bank or credit union account on the following business day.
- These terms and conditions are governed by and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the state of Tennessee.
